For family workers, teachers, school counsellors, early childhood workers, youth workers, health workers - for all who are working with families and children.

This workshop will assist you in understanding the impact of neglect and how to respond helpfully.

How do we think about and work in the space between neglect and 'good enough' parenting?

By attending this workshop you will gain:

- Increased knowledge & understanding of the evidence on what is neglect for 0-16 year olds
- A more sophisticated understanding of how our values, culture and judgements affect our view of neglect and 'good enough' parenting
- An increased understanding of our unique place in responding to neglect
- A greater understanding of ways to work with parents to identify and develop 'good enough' parenting within their family capacity

Trainer - Tricia Williams

Hi my name is Tricia Williams and I have worked within the community services sector for the past 25 years. My passion has always been, and continues to be, my work to support the safety and protection of children and young people.

Over the years I have been fortunate to have held numerous roles within child sexual assault, child protection and family violence specific services within both NGOs and Family and Community Services.

Since 2008 my work is largely facilitating training for NSW statutory child protection caseworkers as well as the delivery of a range of child protection / trauma informed training programs for NGO staff working with families where there are child protection concerns.
